Brian Adams –
Rotary Scholar 2018-19

Brian Adams is currently a fourth year student at the University of Colorado School of Medicine and plans to complete his residency in Internal Medicine with a probable eventual specialization in Infectious Disease.

Building on his experience working in pediatric health in Lima, Peru and for the World Health Organization, he took time off between his second and third years of medical school to complete a Masters in Epidemiology at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine in 2018/2019.

After returning to Denver and while finishing medical school, he served during the COVID-19 outbreak as one of the advisory board members/epidemiologists for Denver Health and the State of Colorado. He was also hired as a Technical Consultant for the World Health Organization in September, and since that time has helped manage several large international COVID-19 projects focusing on COVID-19 decontamination and transmission.
