'Breaking the Man Code': an upstream suicide prevention for adolescent boys

If you have sons, grandsons or nephews this is a 'not to be missed' evening.

Find out about how Australian Rotary Health is working with Monash University to look after the young men in our lives.

Dr Kylie King is a Senior Research Fellow at the Turner Institute for Brain and Mental Health at Monash University.

She has expertise in male suicide prevention research and is particularly interested in the capacity for public health interventions to have positive impacts on boys and men's mental health and suicidality across the lifespan.

She is leading an evaluation of a school-based suicide prevention intervention aimed at adolescent boys, and is also conducting research about suicide prevention for the construction industry.

Kylie has also worked as a psychologist across public and private settings.

We will also be focusing on Lift the Lid on mental illness so wear a hat and help raise some funds for Australia Rotary Health!
